

EQIC launches new focus area webpages

EQIC's website has undergone some updates to redesign the look and improve the functionality of all the tools and resources shared on the focus area pages. The left-hand navigation menu has been reorganized to facilitate access to educational materials.

- The first tab noting the focus area includes the overall materials including assessments, toolkits, guidelines and strategies for improvement.
- The training page is organized by sprints, EQIC webinar recordings, eLearnings and training from external organizations.
- The data page provides a high-level overview of the measures reviewed in this focus area with a link to the data page. Special reports or guidelines are noted where applicable.
- The process improvement tab provides strategies for good PI across the board.

Opioids

EQIC's approach to reducing opioid-related adverse drug events includes preventing unnecessary opioid prescribing and identifying patients at high risk for complications. The EQIC program educates on best prescribing practices including dosing, tapering, avoiding dual-ordering and using opioid alternatives. It also focuses on reducing opioid ADEs, which requires involving the entire care team to identify potential issues, screen patients for opioid tolerance and risk and mitigate risk when a problem is identified.

We hope that as you work in your focus areas of interest, you can easily access the tools and resources. Please reach out to your project manager with any questions on how to access or use any materials on the website.
